Hunt and fish with Petworth House's longtime groundskeeper when you stay at the Corinthia Hotel London.

So you want to be a ... Blue Blood for the Day

BY: BECCA HENSLEY | PHOTOGRAPHY BY JUDITH WHITE

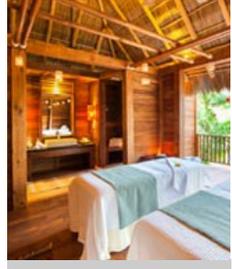

You love London's buzz, but England's bucolic hinterlands intrigue you, too. You're in luck because the Corinthia Hotel London knows just the right people in the countryside. In exclusive collaboration with Lord Egremont and Petworth House, a British National Trust gem, the hotel offers "Fish," "Feather," and "Powder" day trips to the 700-acre, wildlife-abundant estate. While hikers can freely meander the public-access trails that wend through the estate, only Corinthia guests can hunt and fish with Petworth's longtime groundskeeper and Lord and Lady Egremont's staff.

You'll leave Big Ben behind early to travel via helicopter (or Range Rover, if you prefer) to verdant West Sussex, about 50 miles south of London. There, you'll don leather or tweed jerkins and join Corinthia's executive chef, Garry Hollihead, a champion of British-sourced meats; and Petworth's tweed-wearing head groundskeeper, David Whitby. Lord Egremont's gillies and stewards will be right at your side as you hunt pheasant, stalk deer, and cast your line into limpid lakes. You'll picnic amid the wildflowers, indulge in afternoon tea, and take in a private tour of Petworth, which hold's the U.K.'s most revered Turner art collection.

Come dusk, you'll fly home, your prey trussed or packed for the evening's dinner. From $4,558 for two people. 011-44-20-7321-3077; corinthia.com/hotels/london
